POLITICIANS OF STATE LOOK TO '32 PRIMARY

Status of White is Uncertain, Governor May Be National Candidate

OTHERS MENTIONED

Brown Expected to Run For Governors Job

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.—Now that the legislative session is a historical highlight, some attention is being given in state house circles to political speculations with interest centering in preliminary plans for pre-primary campaigns which will be launched next fall and winter.

For the first time in Ohio's history the presidential and state primary elections will be combined next year, in accord with a provision of the state's new election code.

DATES CHANGED

The joint primaries will be held on May 10. Heretofore, in presidential years, the presidential primary was held in April when Ohio voters registered their preference for candidates for president and vice president of the United States and elected delegates and alternates to the national and state conventions to be held by the major political parties in June.

In the following August, the state primary elections were held when nominees for governor and other state and local officers, together with United States Senators and Congressmen were chosen.

Next May all of the selections will be made at the single primary election.

State house politicians are intensely interested in possible developments in the Democratic field.

Governor George White is expected to be re-nominated to succeed himself in the gubernatorial chair. His friends, however, are ardently hoping that he may be selected as the presidential nominee at the Democratic national convention next June, or, at least, be chosen as the nominee for vice-president.

Accordingly, the Democratic state organization, or at least that part of it which supports such political aspirations as Governor White may have, is expected to seek endorsement at the hands of the rank and file of Ohio Democracy of a delegation to the Democratic national convention which would wage a fight for White's nomination for president or vice-president.

Should Governor White land a place on the Democratic ticket, he would probably resign as nominee for a second term as governor.

If custom is observed, the state conventions will not be held until at least a week or two after the close of the national conventions.

Should Governor White be a nominee at the national convention a contest for the vacancy resulting from White's resignation as the gubernatorial nominee is expected to develop at the Democratic state convention.

President Hoover Peeved Over Recent 'News Leaks'; Sleuths Called On Carpet

WASHINGTON, July 10.—While Chief William H. Morgan, of the U. S. secret service, continued his investigation of what the White House has elected to term "recent news leaks," newspaper men today were wondering whether President Hoover was attempting to impose a virtual news censorship.

Theodore G. Joslin, secretary to the president, informed writers that it was the policy of the White House that "all information concerning the president should come only from stated official sources." How many such there are, he declined to say, but he is the sole member of the secretariat charged with contacting with the press.

Governor Signs Cigarette Bill

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.—Ignoring vigorous protests, Governor George White today signed the cigarette tax bill, which levies an excise fee of one cent on every 10 cigarettes.

The governor turned a deaf ear to strenuous objections raised by tobacco dealers and growers all over the state and announced his decision just before leaving for Titusville, Pa., on a vacation.

Announcement of the chief executive's disposal of the bill, which has been a subject of controversy since it was suggested, was made without comment.

Drawn up at the suggestion of members of the legislature's special taxation committee, headed by Senator Robert A. Taft (R) of Cincinnati, the measure is calculated to raise almost $6,000,000 yearly in state revenues. Although it will become effective immediately after it has been certified by the secretary of state, the bill will not become operative until Sept. 1.

Governor George White also signed four other bills, the chief of which was a measure introduced by the special tax committee, increasing membership on the state tax commission from three to four, and boosting the individual salaries from $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

WOMAN SUFFERS BROKEN LIMB

Mrs. Clyde Martindale, aged 45, who lives on the Wilby G. Hyde farm near New Holland is suffering from a fractured left limb which she received Thursday when she slipped and fell at her home.

House means while seemingly is under suspicion of having given out a series of stories which were irksome to Mr. Hoover. Chief Moran is investigating their source by order of Secretary Lawrence Rice, himself a former secret service man, and all of the sleuths are believed to have been called on the carpet.

According to Joslin, "fifteen or twenty stories have leaked in the past few weeks, and we are determined to find out where they came from." The story which precipitated the investigation was a brief item relating the fact that the president left his Rapidan camp so suddenly last Sunday to get back to Washington to resume the debt negotiations, the secret service men were forced to pile in their car while still buttoning their shirts and a basket lunch was forced after him in a following car which caught up with the party far down the road.

A second story, the source of which is being probed, was another brief item relating that the president sent a negro doorman to stop some carpenters from interfering with his after-lunch nap, and the negro solemnly informed the workmen that "the president has declared moratorium no noise for the rest of the afternoon."

A third which annoyed the president told of how his giant Irish wolfhound had bitten one of the marines guarding his Rapidan camp.

What the others were, Joslin refused to reveal, but he seemed confident he would ascertain their source.

Scooping up all the money they could find the two men described as "tough" by the cashier fled out of town in a blue roadster. Conflicting reports were received as to which direction the bandits went. One report said they headed toward Bucyrus, another said they were seen racing for Upper Sandusky.

Bardon who is 60 years old was alone in the bank when the two men entered. He was in the rear of the building counting money in one of the cash drawers when they approached a few minutes before he had opened the drawer of the safe.

The other man armed with a revolver ordered him to lie face down on the floor, according to Bardon.

Dr. Hans Luther Seeks 360 Millions to Regain Reichsbank Strength.

PARIS, July 10.—Fighting desperately to save Germany from financial chaos, Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, arrived in Paris this morning.

He came not only to seek the Bank of France's assistance in obtaining an international loan of about $360,000,000, but to convince skeptical Frenchmen of the Reich's precarious economic position.

The urgency of Dr. Luther's mission was evidenced by his hurried departure from Berlin yesterday. He flew to London, arriving there at noon. After conferences with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and other English financial experts, he left London with Norman for Paris by the night train.

Twin-Sisters Gain Strength

BALTIMORE, July 10.—The twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Foster, born three days ago with their abdomens connected with a thick fleshy ligament, are going to be placed in incubators to help them regain the strength lost when their bodies were separated.

Although their father is a railroad brakeman his infant daughters have aroused the attention of the medical and surgical world and they are destined to receive expert attention and care.

They were resting comfortably today in their reed baskets in Mercy hospital's baby room, their nurses said they were acting just like other twins of normal birth. Underweight at birth, as is the rule with most twins, the Foster babies tipped the scales to only four and one-half pounds. Since then they have gained little, because of the master operator they underwent at the hands of Dr. Daniel J. Pessagno, local surgeon.

NATION'S DRYS DRAWING LINES FOR CAMPAIGN

Rev. Edwin Dinwiddie to Lead Drive Against Appeal, Modification

OPPOSE ROOSEVELT

List of Unfavorable Candidates is Quoted

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The campaign of the united dry forces of the nation to force dry plank in the Republican and Democratic platforms and nominate dry candidates for president will in all probability be directed by the Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, it was learned today.

The post of executive director of the board of strategy, created by the conference of organizations supporting the eighteenth amendment, has been tendered Rev. Dinwiddie and he is under consideration. His acceptance was expected soon.

This action of the dry leaders raises Dr. Dinwiddie to new power among the dry forces of the country.

TO FIGHT REPEAL

It also is regarded as evidence of the determination of dry forces to bring about a "new deal" in the campaign against repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment.

Dr. Dinwiddie, it is known, has not always been in sympathy with the AntiSaloon league of America, which the late Wayne B. Wheeler made the spearhead of political activity of the drys.

As a result of the danger of rivalry cropping up between leaders of many dry organizations after the death of Wheeler, known as the "Dry Czar," an attempt was made to create a "superdry" body embracing more than 30 organizations backing prohibition. It is this organization of which Dr. Dinwiddie is secretary.

WOULD HALT WETS

Under the plan of the drys, the board of strategy, composed of 50 nationally known dry workers, will organize their forces throughout the country to head off wet candidates for the Republican and Democratic presidential and vice-presidential nominations next year. This effort of the drys, launched a year in advance of the national conventions, is contrasted with their action before the 1928 campaign when little organization work was undertaken until delegates had been named to the national conventions.

The campaign for 1932 will be officially opened in September. The dry forces plan to enter drys for the posts of delegates to both national conventions.

Gov. Roosevelt of New York, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Newton D. Baker, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, all suggested for the Democratic nomination, Sen. Dwight Morrow of New Jersey, urged as a wet Republican candidate for president or vice-president, are said to be among the targets of the drys.

Brown Expected to Run
For Governors Job

COLUMBUS, O., July 10.—Now that the legislative session is a historical highlight, some attention is being given in state house circles to political speculations with interest centering in preliminary plans for pre-primary campaigns which will be launched next fall and winter.

For the first time in Ohio's history the presidential and state primary elections will be combined next year, in accord with a provision of the state's new election code.

DATES CHANGED

The joint primaries will be held on May 10. Heretofore, in presidential years, the presidential primary was held in April when Ohio voters registered their preference for candidates for president and vice president of the United States and elected delegates and alternates to the national and state conventions to be held by the major political parties in June.

In the following August, the state primary elections were held when nominees for governor and other state and local officers, together with United States Senator and Congressmen were chosen.

Next May all of the selections will be made at the single primary election.

State house politicians are intensely interested in possible developments in the Democratic fold.

Governor George White is expected to be re-nominated to succeed himself in the gubernatorial chair. His friends, however, are ardently hoping that he may be selected as the presidential nominee at the Democratic national convention next June, or, at least, be chosen as the nominee for vice-president.

Accordingly, the Democratic state organization, or at least that part of it which supports such political aspirations as Governor White may have, is expected to seek endorsement at the hands of the rank and file of Ohio Democracy of a delegation to the Democratic national convention which would wage a fight for White's nomination for president or vice-president.

Should Governor White land a place on the Democratic ticket, he would probably resign as nominee for a second term as governor.

If custom is observed, the state conventions will not be held until at least a week or two after the close of the national conventions. Should Governor White be a nominee at the national convention a contest for the vacancy resulting from White's resignation is expected to develop at the Democratic state convention.

Nine acres of wheat threshed on the John Fellenstein farm near Clarksburg have a yield of 405 bushels, an average of 45 bushels per acre.

This yield resulted in spite of the fact that much of the wheat was blown down.

In an effort to take advantage of the cool weather Fairfield-co farmers are harvesting wheat at night.

Car Kills Four

John J. Driscoll (above), of Jamaica Plain, Mass., has carved a record of tragedy with his automobile, according to authorities. Driscoll is said to have killed four persons in four accidents with his car in recent years. He is shown leaving court, where he appealed from a two months' jail sentence imposed for his latest fatal crash in which a woman was killed.

DIVORCE SUIT IS CONTESTED

Charles Leshar Charged Gross
Neglect of Duty Against His Wife.

Claiming that his wife falsely represented her physical condition to him at the time of their marriage, and that she concealed her illness in an effort to induce him to marry, Charles Leshar of Saltcreek-twp., filed an answer and cross petition to his wife's suit which was filed in common pleas court June 1. He asked that the petition of his wife, Mrs. Leona Leshar of this city be dismissed and he be granted a divorce.

She was guilty of gross neglect, not performing her household duties, piled up extravagant expenses and mistreated him, he says.

R. F. Redfern of Adelphi and Abernethy and Simkins of this city are his attorneys and Barton Walters is attorney for Mrs. Leshar.

GERMANS ASK FRENCH LOAN

Dr. Hans Luther Seeks 360
Millions to Regain Reichsbank Strength.

PARIS, July 10.—Fighting desperately to save Germany from financial chaos, Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, arrived in Paris this morning.

He came not only to seek the Bank of France's assistance in obtaining an international loan of about $360,000,000, but to convince skeptical Frenchmen of the Reich's precarious economic position.

The urgency of Dr. Luther's mission was evidenced by his hurried departure from Berlin yesterday. He flew to London, arriving there at noon. After conferences with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and other English financial experts, he left London with Norman for Paris by the night train.

Twin-Sisters Gain Strength

BALTIMORE, July 10.—The twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Foster, born three days ago with their abdomen connected with a thick fleshy ligament, are going to be placed in incubators to help them regain the strength lost when their bodies were separated.

Although their father is a railroad brakeman his infant daughters have aroused the attention of the medical and surgical world and they are destined to receive expert attention and care.

They were resting comfortably today in their reed baskets in Mercy hospital's baby room, their nurses said they were acting just like other twins of normal birth.

Underweight at birth, as is the rule with most twins, the Foster babies tipped the scales to only four and one-half pounds. Since then they have gained little, because of the master operation they underwent at the hands of Dr. Daniel J. Pessaglio, local surgeon.

NATION'S DRYS DRAWING LINES FOR CAMPAIGN

Rev. Edwin Dinwiddie to Lead Drive Against Appeal, Modification

OPPOSE ROOSEVELT

List of Unfavorable Candidates is Quoted

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The campaign of the united dry forces of the nation to force dry planks in the Republican and Democratic platforms and nominate dry candidates for president will in all probability be directed by the Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, it was learned today.

The post of executive director of the board of strategy, created by the conference of organizations supporting the eighteenth amendment, has been tendered Rev. Dinwiddie and he has it under consideration. His acceptance was expected soon.

This action of the dry leaders raises Dr. Dinwiddie to new power among the dry forces of the country.

TO FIGHT REPEAL

It also is regarded as evidence of the determination of dry forces to bring about a "new deal" in the campaign against repeal or modification of the eighteen amendment.

Dr. Dinwiddie, it is known, has not always been in sympathy with the AntiSaloon league of America, which the late Wayne B. Wheeler made the spearhead of political activity of the drys.

As a result of the danger of rivalry cropping up between leaders of many dry organizations after the death of Wheeler, known as the "Dry Czar," an attempt was made to create a "superdry" body embracing more than 30 organizations backing prohibition. It is this organization of which Dr. Dinwiddie is secretary.

WOULD HALT WETS

Under the plan of the drys, the board of strategy, composed of 50 nationally known dry workers, will organize their forces throughout the country to head off wet candidates for the Republican and Democratic presidential and vice-presidential nominations next year.

This effort of the drys, launched a year in advance of the national conventions, is contrasted with their action before the 1928 campaign when little organization work was undertaken until delegates had been named to the national conventions.

The campaign for 1932 will be officially opened in September. The dry forces plan to enter drys for the posts of delegates to both national conventions.

Gov. Roosevelt of New York, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, Newton D. Baker, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, all suggested for the Democratic nomination, Sen. Dwight Morrow of New Jersey, urged as a wet Republican candidate for president or vice-president, are said to be among the targets of the drys.

WIFE KIDNAPED

CHICAGO, July 10.—In view of her husband and scores of passing motorists, Mrs. Marie Homer, 19, an expectant mother was kidnaped, while she and James Homer, 28, were hitch-hiking from Cheyenne, Wyo., to his parents' home, Nashville, Mich.

Homer thought they were getting a "lift" until the large gray car sped away with his screaming wife. He was so astonished he didn't notice the license number of the car and could not describe the man.

IN THE MARKET BASKET

By the Bureau of Home Economics, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and the Woman's Division of the President's Emergency Committee for employment.

FAMILY FOOD GUIDE

Every meal, milk for children, bread for all.
Every day, cereal in porridge or pudding.
Potatoes.
Tomatoes (or oranges) for children.
A green or yellow vegetable.
A fruit or additional vegetable.
Milk for all.
Two to four times a week
Tomatoes for all.
Dried beans and peas or peanuts.
Eggs (especially for children).
Lean meat, fish or poultry, or cheese.
A new dress for the old American standby, lamb stew, and a jelly dress at that, is a hot weather prescription the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, offers to all home-makers anxious for an inexpensive dish that is easy to prepare in hot weather. Jelly dress and jelly beef stew may sound a little radical to some persons; but if soup can be jellied, and time saving, with the fact that they are more appropriate for July days than hot stews.
The taste for an attractive gelatin of jellied salad is not necessarily coincident with plenty of money for the food budget. If it were, it would be simple to satisfy the longing, for the markets of the world are at one's disposal with all sorts of attractive offerings. When the budget is limited, the task becomes more difficult, since the least expensive and satisfying dishes are usually hot concoctions, like stews and thick soups.

In keeping with the food guide outlined for families with limited incomes, the bureau recently developed a series of six attractive one-dish meals that can be jellied. The ingredients are all inexpensive and the dishes are easy to prepare.

Eggs, fish, rice, spaghetti, vegetables, and stewing meat are used in quantities sufficient to serve five persons very generously, so little additional food need be served. The salads are an excellent medium for utilizing left over vegetables. Fish, other than halibut, may be used in the fish salad. Halibut was chosen because it is usually available throughout the country. Small whole fish may be substituted for the steak variety, but small fish must be thoroughly boned after cooking, usually a rather tedious task. Canned fish may be also served as a basis for a salad, but the canned form requires a little different treatment from fresh fish. It should be drained, flaked and boned and added to the salad as any other cold ingredient. The gelatin should have an acid base as in the fresh fish salad.

The low cost of these delicious jellied dishes is one of their most attractive features; they range from only 30 cents to 61 cents for five generous servings. The only additional expense necessary to make up the meal for the dinner menu suggested today is lettuce or finely shredded cabbage, a tart salad dressing, bread and butter and iced cocoa. The bureau suggests that the ice be removed from the cocoa for very young children, who, as a special treat, are drinking cocoa, which is usually denied them.

Since potatoes are not especially palatable in jellied form they were excluded. The lamb dish has cooked rice in it, however, which not only adds to the food value but is most attractive suspended in the gelatin. Cooked spaghetti was used successfully in two of the combinations, one made with vegetables and the other with canned consommé. Any canned meat broth can be used as a foundation for a jellied dish, a fact that is well to remember for unexpected occasions when fresh meat is not available.

Almost any vegetable can be introduced into these jellied combinations providing it is not watery like squash. With spinach, be careful not to overcook it; it should be comparatively firm and not mushy. Allow spinach to cool and then chop it. Used this way spinach makes a colorful as well as nutritious addition to the salad. Raw cabbage gives crispness and moderates the extreme smoothness which many persons find objectionable in jellied dishes.

It is best to prepare these jellied dishes the day before—or early in the morning, if they are to be served at the evening meal. A plain gelatin will set much faster than any of these, which are chock-full of meat, vegetables or fish. If they are put away to set in a dish with straight sides, the salad will slip out of the molds easily. Be sure to turn them out on a dish that has been rinsed in cold water and not dried. In case the salad does not come out exactly in the center of the plate, it is easy to slide it into place on the wet surface of the dish.

With the various ingredients, all sorts of interesting patterns can be made in the mold, but this takes time which you may not wish to spend on any one meal. If you do decide to take time for decorative effects, the gelatin must be partly set before you lay out the pattern, and then only one layer can be added at a time, allowing each to set a trifle before beginning on the next.

Each of these jellied combinations was considered from the standpoint of making an attractive dish as well as for its nutritive value. Children old enough to have solid food may eat any of the salads, the bureau says. Recipes for all of these jellied dishes may be had free of charge by sending your request to the Bureau of Home Economics, Washington, D. C.

The cost of filling a week's market basket for a family of five, on the basis of the low-cost food guide developed by the bureau, averages $7.60. This estimate was determined from a study of food costs in 12 cities, buying at the average, rather than at the more expensive type stores. New Orleans was low with a figure of $7.24, and New York City was a dollar more. Much of the difference in price was due to the variation in selling practices; some articles can be bought in bulk in certain cities while in others only packaged food are handled—which fact usually adds to the expense per pound. Following are the cities listed according to the rate of expense for filling the market basket: New Orleans, $7.24; Dallas, $7.26; Chicago, $7.31; St. Louis, $7.40; Washington D. C. $7.43; Detroit, $7.47; Philadelphia, $7.58; Pittsburgh, $7.61; Kansas City, $7.68; Charlotte, $7.86; Boston, $8.03; New York City, $8.24.

Martin L. Davey, of Kent, and Henry G. Brunner, of Mansfield, chairman of the Democratic State committee, have been mentioned as possible active, or receptive, candidates for the gubernatorial nomination.

The vacancy might either be filled by the convention delegates or the convention might authorize the state committee to make the selection.

An unsubstantiated rumor, current at the state house, has it that former Governor James M. Cox, of Dayton, might take an active hand in the Democratic national situation and that candidates for delegates and alternates to the national convention, pledged to Cox as a presidential candidate, might enter the field throughout Ohio.

Interest in Ohio Democratic circles would be materially increased if such a contest between Cox and White should develop.

Present indications are that Ohio Republicans will again endorse President Herbert Hoover as the nation's chief executive during another four-year period.

The race for the Republican nomination for governor will be watched with unabated interest.

For the time being, Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown occupies the limelight as an avowed candidate for governor. Numerous county Republican committees have endorsed him for the gubernatorial nomination. Friends of former Governor Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati, confidently anticipate that he will again enter the race for the gubernatorial nomination, and former Congressman James Begg of Cleveland, also is mentioned as a possible contestant. Cooper defeated Begg for the nomination in 1928.

Ohioans next year will elect two congressmen-at-large in addition to the 22 congressmen who will be chosen in the 22 congressional districts. This is due to the failure of the recent legislature to create two additional congressional districts as authorized under the recent federal census.

The census disclosed that the population of the Buckeye state had grown during the past decade to a point where the state was entitled to 24 congressmen.

CANADIAN THISTLE FOUND ON FARMS

Many farmers have gone to work the past two weeks killing the deadly Canadian thistle upon their farms. Numerous methods have been used. Some have entirely dug up the plants from the soil, others have used various poison solutions, while still others have merely cut them down. The latter is probably a crude method.

The Department of Agriculture urges prompt and proper eradication of these thistles, as they have become more numerous each year. Being considered one of the most obnoxious weed pests, they should be destroyed.

RASPBERRY SEASON SHORT THIS YEAR

While the quality of raspberries grown in Pickawpanton this year has been good, the season was cut short by the excessive heat according to growers. It was learned Tuesday that after two weeks the crop virtually had been gathered. Berries retailed at 12 1-2 cents per quart with a ready sale reported.

Unless there is more rain the blackberry and dewberry crop in this county may not amount to much, it has been indicated by farmers. The embryo berries have dried on the briar, with the result that much of the crop has been lost.

RECREATION LEAGUE STANDING TIED; INDIANS DEFEAT GROCERS

Each Team Has Won One Game and Lost One in First Week of Second Half; Independent Grocers Start Game Without Pitcher, Therefore They Are Socked.

Circleville's recreation ball league, in which interest is growing with each game, now stands with every team tied. After the game Thursday evening in which the Red Men protected an early lead long enough to defeat the Independent Grocers, every team had won one game and lost the same number in this first week of the second half. The score was 9-8. Failure of the Grocers to produce a pitcher at the beginning of the game caused their downfall. 'Fanny' Sheltman was called to toss them over and that's about all he did do. Four runs were scored while he was in the game.

Then Joe Barnes took the mound. Joe wasn't hit so hard but the fact that he couldn't get the ball over the plate caused him to retire. Timmy Kline followed Barnes and had this heater been on the hill at the outset things might have developed differently. It was fair-ure of Kline's support to come through that finally lost the game. After the Red Men scored four times in the first frame the Grocers counted one in the second. The Injuns promptly counted twice again and the Grocers retaliated with three counters. One more came over in the fourth. Two runs in the sixth put the Grocers ahead 7-6 but two Red Men runs in the seventh again changed the lead. The Grocers tied the count in the first of the ninth but lost in the last half of the inning.

'Papoose' Hickey got a life on Weller's boot. Young singled through the box, and when Cottie Radcliff batting for Crum, filed out the tension was cut considerably. The bases were loaded when Don White booted Styers' grounder and Hickey crossed the plate ahead of Robinson's throw on Radcliff's slow grounder.

George Crum was the Red Man hurler.

Don White with two triples and a single led the hitters.

Nation's Leading Golfers Will Enter Agua Caliente "Open," Dates Set

AGUA CALIENTE, Baja California, Mexico—
The third annual Agua Caliente "Open" golf tournament will be held next January 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15th, at the Agua Caliente Golf and Country Club, here. Announcement of the dates has just been made by Wirt G. Bowman, President of the club.

The first day, Monday, January 11th, will be given over to the qualifying round of 36 holes, with the tournament proper to be held the following four days. The purse will be $15,000, of which $7,500 will go to the winner. Details of the complete prize distribution will be announced later.

As in past tournaments, the leading golfers of the year will be exempt from qualifying. Those to be exempted will be the first 30 to finish in the United States "Open" championship, the 32 qualifiers in the 1931 championship of the Professional Golfer's Association, and all prize winners of the 1931 Agua Caliente Open. This latter group includes 29 professionals and several amateurs.

DETROIT TIGERS LOOK TOWARD 1932; BUCKY HARRIS PLEASED

DETROIT, Mich., July 10.—Here in Detroit they play baseball with 1932 and 1933 in mind. Like most of the American League teams, the Tigers are merely marking time for the day when age and ennui will bring the Athletics back to the field, but unlike most of the others they are making active preparations to take advantage of that situation when it arises.

"Yeah," answered Bucky Harris, when somebody commented upon the obvious youth of his players, "I guess we've got the youngest team in the major leagues here in Detroit. We're building from the ground up, but a year from now we'll be that much further along than the other teams not now in the race."

"Aside from Marty McManus, not one of the players in today's line-up has been in the league as long as three years. Four of them—Walker, Doljback, Owen, the third baseman, and Brower—have yet to complete a single season."

"Their experience counts against us in this year's ball games, of course. They do so many things wrong. Outfielders have been running together; double plays have been messed up regularly and time and again the kids have permitted themselves to be picked off the bases."

"Those are things they all have to learn, though," continued Bucky, now thoroughly interested in the discussion. "You can't tell it to them. I've tried, of course, but it's a waste of breath. Experience is the only teacher in baseball."

"Right now this experience is expensive, but one of these days it will be well worth the price." A couple of these kids are real prospects; they'll be star ball players a year or two from now. Marvin Owen is a flashy infielder and a good hitter, and Walker in the outfield can run, hit and throw with the best even now.

"Anyway, these kids are hustling for me, and that's something. It's easy to forgive their mistakes when you know they're giving the best they have. They'll scrap until the last putout, and we've won a couple of games this year because they refused to admit they were beaten."

The Farmer Is Paying

DROUGHT victims who appeal to congress for aid and got it are proving their honesty and self-reliance by repaying their government loans with their first crop money. They did not ask for charity and are not treating the drought relief loans as charity.

The borrowing farmers are not even awaiting the marketing of their major crops to begin paying back their loans. The farmers' seed loans office is receiving checks in amounts ranging from less than a dollar to $500, most of them representing earnings from farm products sold in small quantities at retail. But when the government loaned them the money it did not expect even partial repayment until the first major crops had been harvested.

Crop failure, disaster, death and in rare instances, dishonesty will prevent the prompt repayment of a small percentage of these loans, but when the government or private lenders extend the farmer credit or financial help they know that the chances of default are small.

Sometimes politicians coveting the agricultural vote ask alms for the struggling farmer, but the real dirt farmer neither expects nor asks charity and takes the blows of adversity -- and they have fallen upon him with crushing frequency in the last decade -- standing up and fighting back.

LINDSTROM'S INJURY WILL HURT GIANTS

McGraw's Noble Experiment Goes For Naught as Freddie Breaks Bone.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Fate, which has dealt many a winning hand to John J. McGraw in his thirty-one years as a big league baseball manager, reached out today and smacked the veteran pilot squarely on the whiskers.

For McGraw's Giants, who had a glittering chance this season to win the fiery leaders his first National league pennant in seven years, appeared today to be doomed to wind up another campaign among the also rans. Their 1931 pennant hopes received a body blow in Philadelphia yesterday when Fred Lindstrom, New York right fielder fractured a bone in the instep of his left foot while sliding into third base.

Indications at this writing were that Lindy would be lost to the club for at least a month and possibly for the remainder of the season. Loss of his services for even a month would seriously cripple the team.

Lindstrom, a vital cog in the New York machine, is the apple of McGraw's eye. A reliable hitter, fast on the bases and a star in his new role of outfielder, he has been one of the outstanding performers of the national pastime since the world series of 1924 when at the tender age of eighteen, he played substitute's role against Washington with the pose of a veteran.

His loss means that Leach and Allen must be used simultaneously in the New York outfield instead of being alternated in left field against right-hand and southpaw pitching. This will weaken the team's attack unless McGraw decides to take a chance on Fullis in right field, and Fullis is no Lindstrom. The latter, just emerging from a slump, raised his average to .309 by hitting a homer and a single before being injured yesterday.

Lindstrom's injury is especially galling to McGraw because it nullifies the success of his 'noble experiment' in converting the former third baseman into an outfielder and taking a chance on Johnny Vergez, an untied rookie, at third base. McGraw gambled and made a successful move, only to have an unfortunate accident ruin his plans.

Even with the loss of second baseman Hugh Critz, who has been out for several weeks with a sore arm, the Giants still had a fighting chance for the flag. But in view of this second stroke of ill fortune, they will do well to finish better than fourth.

McGraw, whose teams finished no worse than second over a nine-year stretch from 1917 to 1925 inclusive, during which period they set a world's record by winning four straight pennants, had confidently believed that 1931 would be the Giants' year after six pennant-less seasons. He has won ten pennants to Connie Mack's eight, but yesterday's disaster means in all probability that he will be only one up on Mack at the close of the campaign.

RECREATION LEAGUE STANDING TIED; INDIANS DEFEAT GROCERS

Each Team Has Won One Game and Lost One in First Week of Second Half; Independent Grocers Start Game Without Pitcher, Therefore They Are Socked.

Circleville's recreation ball league, in which interest is growing with each game, now stands with every team tied. After the game Thursday evening in which the Red Men protected an early lead long enough to defeat the Independent Grocers, every team had won one game and lost the same number in this first week of the second half. The score was 9-8. Failure of the Grocers to produce a pitcher at the beginning of the game caused their downfall. "Fanny" Sheltman was called to toss them over and that's about all he did do. Four runs were scored while he was in the game. Then Joe Barnes took the mound. Joe wasn't hit so hard but the fact that he couldn't get the ball over the plate caused him to retire. Timmy Kline followed Barnes and had this heavy been on the hill at the outset things might have developed differently. It was failure of Kline's support to come through that finally lost the game. After the Red Men scored four times in the first frame the Grocers counted one in the second. The Injuns promptly counted twice again and the Grocers retaliated with three counters. One more came over in the fourth. Two runs in the sixth put the Grocers ahead 7-6 but two Red Men runs in the seventh again changed the lead. The Grocers tied the count in the first of the ninth but lost in the last half of the inning. "Papoose" Hickey got a life on Weller's boot. Young singled through the box, and when Cottie Radcliff batting for Crum, filed out the tension was cut considerably. The bases were loaded when Don White booted Styler's grounder and Hickey crossed the plate ahead of Robinson's throw on Radcliff's slow grounder. George Crum was the Red Man hurler. Don White with two triples and a single led the hitters. Lineup and summary:

Nation's Leading Golfers Will Enter Agua Caliente "Open;" Dates Set

AGUA CALIENTE, Baja California, Mexico—The third annual Agua Caliente "Open" golf tournament will be held next January 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15th, at the Agua Caliente Golf and Country Club, here. Announcement of the dates has just been made by Wirt G. Bowman, President of the club. The first day, Monday, January 11th, will be given over to the qualifying round of 36 holes, with the tournament proper to be held the following four days. The purse will be $15,000, of which $7,500 will go to the winner. Details of the complete prize distribution will be announced later. As in past tournaments, the leading golfers of the year will be exempt from qualifying. Those to be exempted will be the first 30 to finish in the United States "Open" championship, the 32 qualifiers in the 1931 championship of the Professional Golfer's Association, and all prize winners of the 1931 Agua Caliente Open. This latter group includes 28 professionals and several amateurs. Following the custom in the past two tournaments, the field will be limited to about 100 contestants. The Agua Caliente "Open" inaugurated for the 1928-1930 Winter season, ranks as the major event of Winter golf. It follows the Los Angeles $10,000 "Open" each year, and furnishes the climax of the Winter golf tournament program on the Pacific Coast. Gene Sarazen, professional of the Fresh Meadows country club, Long Island, won the first "Open," held January 20-23, 1930. Sarazen set a course record of 68, three under par, in the final round. Horton Smith, New York, professional, and Al Espinosa, Chicago, tied for second. The second tournament, held last January, developed a great struggle for first place. John Golden, Connecticut professional, and George Von Elm, former national amateur champion, but now a professional, tied for low. They split the prize money, but played off for the medal, Golden winning.

A new dress for the old American standby, lamb stew, and a jelly-dress at that, is a hot weather prescription the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, offers to all homemakers anxious for an inexpensive dish that is easy to prepare in hot weather. Jelly-dress and jelly-dress beef stew may sound a little radical to some persons, but if soup can be jellied, and time saving, with the fact that they are more appropriate for July days than hot stews.

The taste for an attractive gelatin of jellied salad is not necessarily coincident with plenty of money for the food budget. If it were, it would be simple to satisfy the longing, for the markets of the world are at one's disposal with all sorts of attractive offerings. When the budget is limited, the task becomes much more difficult, since the least expensive and satisfying dishes are usually hot concoctions, like stews and thick soups.

In keeping with the food guide outlined for families with limited incomes, the bureau recently developed a series of six attractive one-dish meals that can be jellied. The ingredients are all inexpensive and the dishes are easy to prepare.

Eggs, fish, rice, spaghetti, vegetables, and stewing meat are used in quantities sufficient to serve five persons very generously, so little additional food need be served. The salads are an excellent medium for utilizing left over vegetables. Fish, other than halibut, may be used in the fish salad. Halibut was chosen because it is usually available throughout the country. Small whole fish may be substituted for the steak variety, but small fish must be thoroughly boned after cooking, usually a rather tedious task. Canned fish may be also served as a basis for a salad, but the canned form requires a little different treatment from fresh fish. It should be drained, flaked and boned and added to the salad as any other cold ingredient. The gelatin should have an acid base as in the fresh fish salad.

The low cost of these delicious jellied dishes is one of their most attractive features; they range from only 30 cents to 61 cents for five generous servings. The only additional expense necessary to make up the meal for the dinner menu suggested today is lettuce or finely shredded cabbage, a tart salad dressing, bread and butter and iced cocoa. The bureau suggests that the ice be removed from the cocoa for very young children, who, as a special treat, are drinking cocoa, which is usually denied them.

Since potatoes are not especially palatable in jellied form they were excluded. The lamb dish has cooked rice in it, however, which not only adds to the food value but is most attractive suspended in the gelatin. Cooked spaghetti was used successfully in two of the combinations, one made with vegetables and the other with canned consommé. Any canned meat broth can be used as a foundation for a jellied dish, a fact that is well to remember for unexpected occasions when fresh meat is not available.

Almost any vegetable can be introduced into these jellied combinations providing it is not watery like squash. With spinach, be careful not to overcook it; it should be comparatively firm and not mushy. Allow spinach to cool and then chop it. Used this way spinach makes a colorful as well as nutritious addition to the salad. Raw cabbage gives crispness and moderates the extreme smoothness which many persons find objectionable in jellied dishes.

It is best to prepare these jellied dishes the day before—or early in the morning, if they are to be served at the evening meal. A plain gelatin will set much faster than any of these, which are chock-full of meat, vegetables or fish. If they are put away to set in a dish with straight sides, the salad will slip out of them out on a dish that has been rinsed in cold water and not dried. In case the salad does not come out exactly in the center of the plate, it is easy to slide it into place on the wet surface of the dish.

With the various ingredients, all sorts of interesting patterns can be made in the mold, but this takes time which you may not wish to spend on any one meal. If you do decide to take time for decorative effects, the gelatin must be partly set before you lay out the pattern, and then only one layer can be added at a time, allowing each to set a trifle before beginning on the next.

Each of these jellied combinations was considered from the standpoint of making an attractive dish as well as for its nutritive value. Children old enough to have solid food may eat any of the salads, the bureau says. Recipes for all of these jellied dishes may be had free of charge by sending your request to the Bureau of Home Economics, Washington, D. C.

The cost of filling a week's market basket for a family of five, on the basis of the low-cost food guide developed by the bureau, averages $7.60. This estimate was determined from a study of food costs in 12 cities, buying at the average, rather than at the more expensive type stores. New Orleans was low with a figure of $7.24, and New York City was a dollar more. Much of the difference in price was due to the variation in selling practices; some articles can be bought in bulk in certain cities while in others only packaged food are handled—which fact usually adds to the expense per pound. Following are the cities listed according to the rate of expense for filling the market basket: New Orleans, $7.24; Dallas, $7.26; Chicago, $7.31; St. Louis, $7.40; Washington D. C. $7.43; Detroit, $7.47; Philadelphia, $7.58; Pittsburgh, $7.61; Kansas City, $7.68; Charlotte, $7.86; Boston, $8.03; New York City, $8.24.

LAMB AND VEGETABLES IN ASPIC

2 pounds breast of lamb.
3 pints water.
2 1-2 teaspoons salt.
3 tablespoons gelatin.
1-2 cup cold water.
1 cup cooked flaky rice.
1 cup cooked chopped spinach.
1 cup cooked diced carrots.

1 cup lean chopped lamb.
2 tablespoons lemon juice.
1 teaspoon onion pulp.

Wipe the meat well, put in a sautépan, add the 3 pints of cold water, partly cover and simmer until the meat is tender. Remove the meat, add sufficient hot water to the broth to make 1 quart. Add the salt. Allow this to cool, and remove the fat. Soften the gelatin in the 1-2 cup of cold water for 5 minutes. Reheat the broth, pour over the gelatin and stir until the gelatin has dissolved. When the gelatin mixture has partly set add the vegetables, meat, lemon juice and onion pulp. Stir until well mixed and pour the mixture into a wet mold and put in a cold place until set. Turn out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with salad dressing.

JELLIED VEGETABLE SALAD

3 tablespoons gelatin.
1-2 cup cold water.
1 quart can tomatoes.
2 teaspoons salt.
1 1-2 cups cooked peas.
2 cups shredded raw cabbage.
1 cup cooked spaghetti.

Soften the gelatin in the 1-2 cup of cold water for 5 minutes. Add the salt to the tomatoes and heat to the boiling point and then press through a fine sieve to remove the seeds. Pour the hot tomato pulp and juice over the gelatin and stir until the gelatin has dissolved. When the gelatin mixture is partly set add the vegetables. Stir until well mixed. Pour the mixture into a wet mold and put in a cold place until set. Turn out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with salad dressing.

JELLIED FISH SALAD

1 pound halibut.
1 quart water.
3 teaspoons salt.
Pepper.
3 tablespoons gelatin.
1-2 cup cold water.
1 3-4 cups diced skinned tomatoes.
2 cups shredded raw cabbage.
6 tablespoons lemon juice.

Simmer the fish in the quart of water with a bay leaf for about 10 minutes, or until tender. Drain and to the liquid add enough hot water to make 1 quart. Add the salt and pepper. Remove the skin and bones from the halibut and cut into even pieces. Soften the gelatin in the 1-2 cup of cold water for five minutes and pour over the hot fish stock and stir until the gelatin has dissolved. When the gelatin mixture has partly set add the fish, vegetables, and lemon juice. Stir until well mixed. Pour the mixture into a wet mold and put in a cold place until set. Turn out on crisp lettuce leaves and serve with salad dressing.

Martin L. Davey, of Kent, and Henry G. Brunner, of Mansfield, chairman of the Democratic State committee, have been mentioned as possible active, or receptive, candidates for the gubernatorial nomination.

The vacancy might either be filled by the convention delegates or the convention might authorize the state committee to make the selection.

An unsubstantiated rumor, current at the state house, has it that former Governor James M. Cox, of Dayton, might take an active hand in the Democratic national situation and that candidates for delegates and alternates to the national convention, pledged to Cox as a presidential candidate, might enter the field throughout Ohio.

Interest in Ohio Democratic circles would be materially increased if such a contest between Cox and White should develop.

Present indications are that Ohio Republicans will again endorse President Herbert Hoover as the nation's chief executive during another four-year period.

The race for the Republican nomination for governor will be watched with unabated interest.

For the time being, Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown occupies the limelight as an avowed candidate for governor. Numerous county Republican committees have endorsed him for the gubernatorial nomination. Friends of former Governor Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati, confidently anticipate that he will again enter the race for the gubernatorial nomination, and former Congressman James Begg of Cleveland, also is mentioned as a possible contestant. Cooper defeated Begg for the nomination in 1928.

Ohioans next year will elect two congressmen-at-large in addition to the 22 congressmen who will be chosen in the 22 congressional districts. This is due to the failure of the recent legislature to create two additional congressional districts as authorized under the recent federal census.

The census disclosed that the population of the Buckeye state had grown during the past decade to a point where the state was entitled to 24 congressmen.

CANADIAN THISTLE FOUND ON FARMS

Many farmers have gone to work the past two weeks killing the deadly Canadian thistle upon their farms. Numerous methods have been used. Some have entirely dug up the plants from the soil, others have used various poison solutions, while still others have merely cut them down. The latter is probably a crude method.

The Department of Agriculture urges prompt and proper eradication of these thistles, as they have become more numerous each year. Being considered one of the most obnoxious weed pests, they should be destroyed.

RASPBERRY SEASON SHORT THIS YEAR

While the quality of raspberries grown in Pickaway-county this year has been good, the season was cut short by the excessive heat according to growers. It was learned Tuesday that after two weeks the crop virtually had been gathered. Berries retailed at 12 1-2 cents per quart with a ready sale reported.

Unless there is more rain the blackberry and dewberry crop in this county may not amount to much, it has been indicated by farmers. The embryo berries have dried on the briar, with the result that much of the crop has been lost.

MYSTIC SHRINE TO CONVEINE IN OHIO JULY 12

Cleveland Arranges to Entertain 75,000 Delegates To Convention.

BY KARL BROADLEY
Editor, The Masonic Beacon.

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—Final arrangements are being made here for the reception and entertainment of more than 75,000 Masons, members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who will meet in their Imperial Council sessions here, July 12-16.

The world's most brilliant array of uniformed marching units, bands, drum corps and other groups from 50 cities of the United States and Canada, will present 10,000 men in parade formation during the convention.

A massed band of 3,000 trained musicians will be heard.

Syria Temple Shrine of Pittsburgh, Penna., will bring the largest delegation, 1,030 Nobles. The Syria band of 60 pieces, the patrol of 80 marchers, the Oriental Patrol of 35 Nobles and a score of Chanters will be featured in the session programs.

Medinah Temple, of Chicago, will send 1,000 Nobles by boat via the Great Lakes. Included in this group will be a band of 124 musicians, a patrol of 180 marchers, an Oriental patrol of 55 men, and 67 chanters. Lu Lu Temple of Philadelphia, Pa., will have five uniformed units, or 915 Shriners, at the convention.

In addition to the Shrines from the larger cities in North America, reservations are being received daily from the remainder of the 150 Shrine Temples, each of which will have a delegation present at the Imperial Council session.

The session will get under way here Sunday afternoon, July 12, when Vesper services are to be held in the new $2,500,000 municipal stadium.

A parade of all Ohio Shrine units in gala array will be held on Monday. The parade will precede the all-Ohio ceremonial which will be staged in the Cleveland Public Auditorium.

On Tuesday, 10,000 men in Shrine uniform will pass in review before Imperial Potentate Esten A. Fletcher, of Damascus Temple, Rochester, N. Y. This dramatic and colorful scene will take place in the Cleveland stadium and an assemblage of 75,000 persons is expected to witness the exhibition of Shrinedom's crack units.

The stadium exhibition will be the greatest peace-time gathering of uniformed men ever seen in Cleveland, it is believed. Sixty patrols, Indians, Arabs patrols drum corps, chanters, and 50 roused bands, will provide entertainment.

Exhibition drills will be given on Tuesday afternoon by expert uniformed units, many of which have won laurels in national competition for their skillful military maneuvers.

Advertised as the "world's greatest spectacle," the pageant "A Night in the Orient," will be presented at the stadium on Tuesday night.

Three of the world's largest shows and circuses will be combined to present the play.

The stage, 450 feet in length, will be used by more than 600 actors, hundreds of horses, camels, elephants and other animal circuses. A realistic volcano eruption and a pretentious fireworks display will close the program.

The grand parade of the convention will be staged Wednesday night in the stadium beneath the brilliant illumination of many high-powered lamps. Every uniformed unit at the convention will participate.

A second presentation of the drama, "A Night in the Orient," is scheduled for Thursday night.

Among Ohio Shrine groups to be represented at the convention will include, Alladin, of Columbus; Syrian, Cincinnati; Tadmor, Akron, and Zenobia, Toledo.

A second presentation of the drama, "A Night in the Orient," is scheduled for Thursday night.

Among Ohio Shrine groups to be represented at the convention will include, Alladin, of Columbus; Syrian, Cincinnati; Tadmor, Akron, and Zenobia, Toledo.

On Tuesday, 10,000 men in Shrine uniform will pass in review before Imperial Potentate Esten A. Fletcher, of Damascus Temple, Rochester, N. Y. This dramatic and colorful scene will take place in the Cleveland stadium and an assemblage of 75,000 persons is expected to witness the exhibition of Shrinedom's crack units.

The stadium exhibition will be the greatest peace-time gathering of uniformed men ever seen in Cleveland, it is believed. Sixty patrols, Indians, Arabs patrols drum corps, chanters, and 50 roused bands, will provide entertainment.

Exhibition drills will be given on Tuesday afternoon by expert uniformed units, many of which have won laurels in national competition for their skillful military maneuvers.

Advertised as the "world's greatest spectacle," the pageant "A Night in the Orient," will be presented at the stadium on Tuesday night.

Three of the world's largest shows and circuses will be combined to present the play.

The stage, 450 feet in length, will be used by more than 600 actors, hundreds of horses, camels, elephants and other animal circuses. A realistic volcano eruption and a pretentious fireworks display will close the program.

The grand parade of the convention will be staged Wednesday night in the stadium beneath the brilliant illumination of many high-powered lamps. Every uniformed unit at the convention will participate.

TRICKS of MAGIC
EXPLAINED by WILL L. LINDHORST

TWO CARDS PLACED IN PACK LATER APPEAR ON TOP

PERFORMER PLACES THESE TWO CARDS ON TOP OF PACK

SPECTATOR IS ASKED TO PLACE THESE TWO IN THE PACK

This trick is a test of observation and memory. Take these four cards from a pack, the eight of diamonds, eight of hearts, seven of diamonds and seven of hearts. Previous to appearing before your audience, place the eight of diamonds and seven of hearts on top of the pack. Then take the eight of hearts and seven of diamonds and place them anywhere in the pack. Lay the pack on a table, pass your hand over it, say "Presto!" and tap the top of the deck with your fingers. Then ask some one to raise the first two cards of the deck and lo! the cards that were placed in the deck mysteriously appear on top. The four cards are so similar that the average person will not be able to recall, after the trick is performed, whether or not the two on top are the same as the two placed in the pack.

Canned Foods

IT is comforting to have from the federal department of agriculture the assurance that the prejudice and distrust against canned foods a generation ago have been almost entirely removed by the "twenty years or more of constructive effort on the part of the canning industry, backed by the continual pressure in behalf of sound, honest products exerted through the enforcement of the Federal food and drugs acts."

There may still be some prejudice, but there are few persons who refuse to purchase "canned goods" from the stores. The public soon learns which manufacturers and brands are reliable, and refuses to buy any that are not up to the highest standards; and in many instances refuse to deal with stores which carry inferior goods. Government inspectors are alert and keep a watchful eye upon the canneries and the packers. It is no longer necessary for the housewife to stand in a hot kitchen "putting up" fruits and vegetables, as she can buy—often at lower prices—as good, if not better, canned fruits and vegetables, jams and jellies than she can produce.

We are told that "domestic inspection of canning practices, plants and products goes vigilantly on, year in and year out, from Maine to Florida, and from California to Washington. Wherever food is canned for human consumption, there are the food and drug inspectors watching, advising, reporting all they see and hear to the district offices at New York, Chicago, San Francisco and to headquarters at Washington, D. C. And there are many, very many, families that depend upon the delicatessen and grocery stores.

The Eternal

OLD men observe their birthday anniversaries expounding the secret of their longevity, while old ladies usually spend theirs telling their granddaughters and social editors how they preserved their complexion and protected their girlhood beauty against the ravages of time. A Philadelphia of 103 years retained here smooth complexion by steaming her face and eschewing rouge.

Femininity is little different in real life than in myth and legend. Apuleius, in the story of Cupid and Psyche in his "Metamorphoses," recounts how Psyche had wounded Cupid with one of his own arrows and Venus had lost her freshness while nursing her son. She ordered Psyche to go to Persephone in the underworld and bring back to her a small box containing enough beauty for one day. The box contained nothing but a night's sleep.

This mythical tale probably inspired the Shakespearean line about sleep, "nature's sweet restorer which knits up the raveled sleeve of care."

Though there is no aid to beauty as efficacious as sleep, it is probably the hardest to get in this day and age. The women of the United States spend many millions a year for cosmetics and beauty treatments but can find little time for sleep. They must depend upon poor substitutes for the beauty recipe of Venus.

The most far-sight sports experts in the neighborhood only has three openings left on his 1931 All-American eleven.

Goddess Venus sent Psyche to the underworld for a box of sleep. They are still putting them to sleep in the underworld.

Orphaned by the death of her parents, beautiful and vivacious Mary Lou Thurston lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson, and takes care of Billy, their son. When Sanderson and his wife go abroad, leaving Billy with his grandmother, Mary Lou is left on her own. Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter and Mary Lou's pal, finds an ad in which a companion for a semi-invalid is sought. Mary Lou leaves to apply for the position.

CHAPTER VII.

AS he steered her through the morning throng she found breath enough to inquire anxiously:

"Larry! How do I look?"

"A million dollars," said Larry gravely, "and I wouldn't ask for a cent less."

In the taxi, however, he looked her over from head to toe and nodded.

"You'll do. Keep a stiff upper lip and remember that your great-grandmother was a lady. Don't let 'em put it over on you. I looked up this Lorrimer bunch. There's just a Mrs. Lorrimer and her son, so the invalid must be the lady herself. They are simply all over stocks and bonds."

Mary Lou began to be alarmed. This would be her first excursion into the Clan of Heavy Income Taxes.

"Don't worry," Larry advised, reading her thoughts. "Kind hearts are more than Bethlehem Steel."

He put her on her train with two minutes to spare and gravely handed her a very wild looking French periodical which he had bought earlier that morning.

"Put this under your arm," he ordered, "and it will make a swell impression."

He ran along the platform as the train pulled out, shouting advice, commands and encouragement.

"Ring me up," he panted, "when you get to town. I'll be at the office, or leave word. Remember, don't let 'em put anything over on you. You are a 'linal descendant of Queen Cleopatra!'"

A Sense of Humor.

She was still smiling when she turned to the pages of the magazine and she kept on smiling for quite a time, but decided before Westmill was reached that perhaps, after all, she had better leave Larry's gift in the train. Her sense of humor was still with her and also her knowledge of French, but, after all, she wasn't so sure about the unknown invalid.

She reached Westmill and made inquiries at the severe Georgian brick station. The Lorrimer estate was some distance away, and Mary Lou, peering in her purse, discovered to her relief that because of Larry's forethought in providing tickets—including a return—she had quite enough money for the emergency of a taxi.

Presently she was passing through the neat shopping district and the village and turning off on gorgeous country roads where the trees, not yet bare, almost met overhead. The driver was, for a wonder, not loquacious, so Mary Lou was able to enjoy her ride in peace. She had the windows down and the crisp November air brought a sparkle to her eyes and a smile to her curving red lips.

Presently they rattled past great gate posts, up a long tree-bordered driveway, curving and very lovely.

To the left she caught a glimpse of water—a lake, she thought, but as they came up the approach to the house she saw that it was really a bend of the Sound, curving to a white half-moon of a beach.

The house was of stone, with a great central portion and two beautifully proportioned wings. Ivy almost covered it, and the stone itself, where it could be seen, and that of the chimneys had mellowed to a lovely soft gray. The site was high above the Sound, there were wide curving, sloping lawns, still velvet green, and many fine old trees. There would be glowing gardens in Summer, she thought, with a catch of her breath, for there were still belated roses, dahlias and other blooms, much as at Oakdale, but on quite a different scale. And she saw a big hothouse among the out-buildings. She saw glassed-in porches as they stopped at the house itself. It was a beautiful place, too lovely, she thought, with an effect of loving thought and a knowledge of furniture and of what constituted comfort.

Presently the man-servant reappeared and motioned to her to follow him.

Granted an Audience.

"Mrs. Lorrimer will see you," he murmured, and stood aside to let her enter, not, as she had half expected, an entrancing but frightening drawing-room, but a sunny morning room, all low, deep chairs and chintzes, with a great curved window full of growing plants and, she saw as she entered, a great square aquarium of exotic fish and two brilliant macaws swinging from their perches.

But she forgot everything as she caught her first glimpse of the woman who rose from a business-like looking desk to greet her.

Mrs. Lorrimer was very tall and very slender. She was beautifully groomed. Her white hair was short, cut close to her noble head, lying in flat waves, clinging, soft. Her a sinking heart, to be anything but indifferent toward her.

Mary Lou's heart almost choked her with disappointment.

She paid the driver with gloved hands which shook a little, approached the door and pressed the bell as firmly as possible. She was frightened and she knew it. "Don't be an idiot!" she told herself, but telling didn't help somehow.

Elegant Simplicity.

The door opened and she found herself facing a grave, lean butler. She stammered something and then discovered she was holding out the advertisement, plucked from her purse.

"If I could see Mrs. Lorrimer . . . in answer to this?"

His face did not change, although his eyes flickered briefly with some emotion . . . astonishment, perhaps, or curiosity. He proffered card and the advertisement and offered her a tall, high-backed carved chair in the big square hall in which she found herself. She sat there, looking about her at the comfort, the luxury, the marvelous restrained taste. It was lovely—and yet so like coming home. That was what attracted and amazed her. She saw evidence all about her of great wealth spent on beauty, yet the effect was not oppressive. It was gown was that superb dahlia shade, neither purple nor red, very plain, very expertly cut. And the eyes bent on Mary Lou were beautiful dark brown with amber lights.

Her face was thin to haggardness. Her mouth, touched with a clever lipstick, was a nervous mouth, but sweet. But all her fine features had about them that quality of something held in leash, something tense and fine drawn which is so disturbing to the observer because it tells of such hard won self-control and such restraint and repression.

"I'm Mary Lou Thurston," said Mary Lou, "and I came about the advertisement."

She was praying in her heart. She had fallen in love at first sight. "Oh, please make her let me stay!" she was saying over and over.

"I know," said Mrs. Lorrimer, and her voice was lovely. She had been holding the advertisement between the long fingers of one beautiful hand and now she laid it on the desk and sat down, motioning Mary Lou to a chair. "I understand . . . and I'm so sorry."

Mary Lou's heart almost choked her with disappointment. The plan was filled then! Well, she might have known it was too good to be true!

Medicinal Poisons Must Be Kept "Out of Reach"

Avoid the Possibility of Tragic Accidents by Keeping All Medicines in a Guarded Place, Urges Authority; Teach Children the Dangers of Drugs

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MANY of the fatalities reported in the newspapers are caused by strychnine poisoning. The tragedy is all the greater because these avoidable accidents usually occur among children.

Most pills and tablets taken by persons suffering with constipation contain a certain amount of strychnine. Of course, the drug is present in small quantities.

When taken internally in large amounts strychnine is fatal in its effects. It is not harmful when taken in prescribed doses.

Children are often tempted by the sugar coating of the pills and their pleasant taste. That is why they must be kept away from the reach of the youngsters. In some of the reported cases, as many as fifty tablets have been consumed before the danger was recognized.

Frequently the color of the medicine is an attraction to the child. When carelessly left within reach, the pills gravitate to the mouth and are swallowed.

If you use any patent medicines, please do not leave them within reach of the children. All medicines should be labeled and kept in a locked medicine cabinet. Children should be taught the dangers of drugs.

These tragedies are far too numerous. Statistics from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company show that during 1925, 1927 and 1928 there were 273 deaths among children due to poisoning.

The type of poisoning was known in 241 deaths, 82 of which were due to strychnine. Out of 82 cases of strychnine poisoning, 46 were due to the taking of cathartic tablets.

I know of no cases of constipation which have been cured by cathartic pills containing strychnine. But I do know of many cases of strychnine poisoning that never would have occurred if some careless person had not left the pills within the reach of children.

Theaters

AT THE GRAND

Smacking of salty spray and the hot breath of adventure, "The Sea Wolf," Fox Movietone talkie of the famous Jack London, novel, comes to the Grand Theatre with Milton Sills, Jane Keith and Raymond Hackett in the featured roles.

The picture is a thrilling tale of a strange romance aboard a sealing vessel in the North Pacific, with the menacing figure of the "Wolf," the master of the schooner, furnishing the powerful drama and gripping situations of the story. With its nautical sequences filmed entirely at sea, even to the precedent of making the cabin interiors right aboard the specially fitted schooner, Director Alfred Santell is said to have achieved unusual realism in his handling of the story.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Gun Smoke," the main feature at the Cliftona Theatre, where it began yesterday for a three-day run, is the most up-to-date Western picture that has yet been shown on the talking screen. The time of this story is today.

It deals with the mustang-hunting men of the Idaho badlands who round up hundreds of wild horses each year and sell them for handsome sums. Into this territory, to escape arrest at the hands of city police, comes a gang of racketeers bent on gaining new spoils from the peace-loving people of the West. The result is a number of exciting episodes and adventures in which Westerners and city gangsters have ample chance to show their prowess as marksmen.

Richard Arlen is the hero, the leaders of the mustang-hunters who finally triumph over their urban enemies. Mary Brian is the beautiful owner of the ranch about which action centers. William Boyd, who was the villain of Gary Cooper's "The Spoilers" and of Jack Oakie's "The Gang Busters" is the big shot of the gun mob.

Canned Foods
It is comforting to have from the federal department of agriculture the assurance that the prejudice and distrust against canned foods a generation ago have been almost entirely removed by the "twenty years or more of constructive effort on the part of the canning industry, backed by the continual pressure in behalf of sound, honest products exerted through the enforcement of the Federal food and drugs acts." There may still be some prejudice, but there are few persons who refuse to purchase "canned goods" from the stores.
The public soon learns which manufacturers and brands are reliable, and refuses to buy any that are not up to the highest standards; and in many instances refuse to deal with stores which carry inferior goods. Government inspectors are alert and keep a watchful eye upon the canneries and the packers. It is no longer necessary for the housewife to stand in a hot kitchen "putting up" fruits and vegetables, as she can buy—often at lower prices—as good, if not better, canned fruits and vegetables, jams and jellies than she can produce.
We are told that "domestic inspection of canning practices, plants and products goes vigilantly on, year in and year out, from Maine to Florida, and from California to Washington. Wherever food is canned for human consumption, there are the food and drug inspectors watching, advising, reporting all they see and hear to the district offices at New York, Chicago, San Francisco and to headquarters at Washington, D. C. And there are many, very many, families that depend upon the delicatessen and grocery stores."

The Eternal
Old men observe their birthday anniversaries expounding the secret of their longevity, while old ladies usually spend their telling their granddaughters and social editors how they preserved their complexion and protected their girlhood beauty against the ravages of time. A Philadelphia of 103 years retained her smooth complexion by steaming her face and eschewing rouge.
Femininity is little different in real life than in myth and legend. Apuleius, in the story of Cupid and Psyche in his "Metamorphoses," recounts how Psyche had wounded Cupid with one of his own arrows and Venus had lost her freshness while nursing her son. She ordered Psyche to go to Persephone in the underworld and bring back to her a small box containing enough beauty for one day. The box contained nothing but a night's sleep.
This mythical tale probably inspired the Shakespearean line about sleep, "nature's sweet restorer which knits up the raveled sleeve of care."
Though there is no aid to beauty as efficacious as sleep, it is probably the hardest to get in this day and age. The women of the United States spend many millions a year for cosmetics and beauty treatments but can find little time for sleep. They must depend upon poor substitutes for the beauty recipe of Venus.
The most far-sight sports experts in the neighborhood only has three openings left on his 1931 All-American eleven.
Goddess Venus sent Psyche to the underworld for a box of sleep. They are still putting them to sleep in the underworld.
Dora saw a reproduction of Millet's "Man with a Hoe" recently and thought it was an odd nicker the chap was leaning on.
We have just discovered why we have world fliers, champions and other celebrities. So New York can have parades and official receptions.
There is a fellow around Circleville who is on so many committees of one kind or another that he hasn't eaten a lunch in private for two years.
Perhaps the motor magnate's son who has gone into publishing will get out a non-borrowable book. Our trouble heretofore has been the quick pickup.

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN
Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER VII.
As he steered her through the morning through she found breath enough to inquire anxiously:
"Larry! How do I look?"
"A million dollars," said Larry gravely, "and I wouldn't ask for a cent less."
In the taxi, however, he looked her over from head to toe and nodded.
"You'll do. Keep a stiff upper lip and remember that your great grandmother was a lady. Don't let 'em put it over on you. I looked up this Lorrimer bunch. There's just a Mrs. Lorrimer and her son, so the invalid must be the lady herself. They are simply all over stocks and bonds."
Mary Lou began to be alarmed. This would be her first excursion into the Clan of Heavy Income Taxes.
"Don't worry," Larry advised, reading her thoughts. "Kind hearts are more than flesh and blood." He put her on her train with two minutes to spare and gravely handed her a very wild looking French periodical which he had bought earlier that morning.
"Put this under your arm," he ordered, "and it will make a swell impression."
He ran along the platform as the train pulled out, shouting advice, commands and encouragement.
"Ring me up," he panted, "when you get to town. I'll be at the office, or leave word. Remember, don't let 'em put anything over. Remember, you are a 'linal descendant of Queen Cleopatra!"

A Sense of Humor.
She was still smiling when she turned to the pages of the magazine and she kept on smiling for quite a time, but decided before Westmill was reached that perhaps, after all, she had better leave Larry's gift in the train. Her sense of humor was still with her and also her knowledge of French, but, after all, she wasn't so sure about the unknown invalid.
She reached Westmill and made inquiries at the severe Georgian brick station. The Lorrimer estate was some distance away, and Mary Lou, peering in her purse, discovered to her relief that because of Larry's forethought in providing tickets—including a return—she had quite enough money for the emergency of a taxi.
Presently she was passing through the neat shopping district and the village and turning off on gorgeous country roads where the trees, not yet bare, almost met overhead. The driver was, for a wonder, not loquacious, so Mary Lou was able to enjoy her ride in peace. She had the windows down and the crisp November air brought a sparkle to her eyes and a smile to her curving red lips.
Presently they rattled past great gate posts, up a long tree-bordered driveway, curving and very lovely.

Elegant Simplicity.
The door opened and she found herself facing a grave, lean butler. She stammered something and then discovered she was holding out the advertisement, plucked from her purse.
"If I could see Mrs. Lorrimer," in answer to this.
His face did not change, although his eyes flickered briefly with some emotion... astonishment, perhaps, or curiosity. He gravely bowed her in, took her proffered card and the advertisement and offered her a tall, high-backed carved chair in the big square hall in which she found herself. She sat there, looking about her at the comfort, the luxury, the marvelous restrained taste. It was lovely—and yet so like coming home. That was what attracted and amazed her. She saw evidence all about her of great wealth spent on beauty, yet the effect was not oppressive. It was a sinking heart, to be anything but indifferent toward her.
She said the driver with gloved hands which shook a little, approached the door and pressed the bell as firmly as possible. She was frightened and she knew it. "Don't be an idiot," she told herself, but telling didn't help somewhat.

Medicinal Poisons Must Be Kept "Out of Reach"
Avoid the Possibility of Tragic Accidents by Keeping All Medicines in a Guarded Place, Urges Authority; Teach Children the Dangers of Drugs

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

MANY of the fatalities reported in the newspapers are caused by strychnine poisoning. The tragedy is all the greater because these avoidable accidents usually occur among children.

Most pills and tablets taken by persons suffering with constipation contain a certain amount of strychnine. Of course, the drug is present in small quantities.

When taken internally in large amounts strychnine is fatal in its effects. It is not harmful when taken in prescribed doses.

Children are often tempted by the sugar coating of the pills and their pleasant taste. That is why they must be kept away from the reach of the youngsters. In some of the reported cases, as many as fifty tablets have been consumed before the danger was recognized.

Frequently the color of the medicine is an attraction to the child. When carelessly left within reach, the pills gravitate to the mouth and are swallowed.

If you use any patent medicines, please do not leave them within reach of the children. All medicines should be labeled and kept in a locked medicine cabinet. Children should be taught the dangers of drugs.

These tragedies are far too numerous. Statistics from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company show that during 1925, 1927 and 1928 there were 273 deaths among children due to poisoning.

The type of poisoning was known in 241 deaths, 82 of which were due to strychnine. Out of 82 cases of strychnine poisoning, 46 were due to the taking of cathartic tablets.

I know of no cases of constipation which have been cured by cathartic pills containing strychnine. But I do know of many cases of strychnine poisoning that never would have occurred if some careless person had not left the pills within the reach of children.

Theaters
AT THE GRAND
Smacking of salty spray and the hot breath of adventure, "The Sea Wolf," Fox Movietone talkie of the famous Jack London, novel, comes to the Grand Theatre with Milton Sills, Jane Keith and Raymond Hackett in the featured roles.
The picture is a thrilling tale of a strange romance aboard a sealing vessel in the North Pacific, with the menacing figure of the "Wolf," the master of the schooner, furnishing the powerful drama and gripping situations of the story. With its nautical sequences filmed entirely at sea, even to the precedent of making the cabin interiors right aboard the specially fitted schooner, Director Alfred Santell is said to have achieved unusual realism in his handling of the story.

AT THE CLIFTONA
"Gun Smoke," the main feature at the Cliftona Theatre, where it began yesterday for a three-day run, is the most up-to-date Western picture that has yet been shown on the talking screen. The time of this story is today.
It deals with the mustang-hunting men of the Idaho badlands who round up hundreds of wild horses each year and sell them for handsome sums. Into this territory, to escape arrest at the hands of city police, comes a gang of racketeers bent on gaining new spoils from the peace-loving people of the West. The result is a number of exciting episodes and adventures in which Westerners and city gangsters have ample chance to show their prowess as marksmen.
Richard Arlen is the hero, the leaders of the mustang-hunters who finally triumph over their urban enemies. Mary Brian is the beautiful owner of the ranch about which action centers. William Boyd, who was the villain of Gary Cooper's "The Spoilers" and of Jack Oakie's "The Gang Busters" is the big shot of the gun mob.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

TWO CARDS PLACED IN PACK LATER APPEAR ON TOP

This trick is a test of observation and memory. Take these four cards from a pack, the eight of diamonds, eight of hearts, seven of diamonds and seven of hearts. Previous to appearing before your audience, place the eight of diamonds and seven of hearts on top of the pack. Then take the eight of hearts and seven of diamonds and ask some one to place them anywhere in the pack. Lay the pack on a table, pass your hand over it, say "Presto!" and tap the top of the deck with your fingers. Then ask some one to raise the first two cards on the deck and lo! the cards that were placed in the deck mysteriously appear on top. The four cards are so similar that the average person will not be able to recall, after the trick is performed, whether or not the two on top are the same as the two placed in the pack.

MYSTIC SHRINE TO CONVEINE IN OHIO JULY 12

Cleveland Arranges to Entertain 75,000 Delegates To Convention.

BY KARL BROADLEY Editor, The Masonic Beacon.

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—Final arrangements are being made here for the reception and entertainment of more than 75,000 Masons, members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, who will meet in their Imperial Council sessions here, July 12-16.

The world's most brilliant array of uniformed marching units, bands, drum corps and other groups from 50 cities of the United States and Canada, will present 10,000 men in parade formation during the convention. A massed band of 3,000 trained musicians will be heard.

Syria Temple Shrine of Pittsburgh, Penna., will bring the largest delegation, 1,030 Nobles. The Syria band of 60 pieces, the patrol of 80 marchers, the Oriental Patrol of 35 Nobles and a score of Chanters will be featured in the session programs.

Medinah Temple, of Chicago, will send 1,000 Nobles by boat via the Great Lakes. Included in this group will be a band of 124 musicians, a patrol of 180 marchers, an Oriental patrol of 55 men, and 67

chanters. Lu Lu Temple of Philadelphia, Pa., will have five uniformed units, or 915 Shriners, at the convention.

In addition to the Shrines from the larger cities in North America, reservations are being received daily from the remainder of the 180 Shrine Temples, each of which will have a delegation present at the Imperial Council session.

The session will get under way here Sunday afternoon, July 12, when Vesper services are to be held in the new $2,500,000 municipal stadium.

A parade of all Ohio Shrine units in gala array will be held on Monday. The parade will precede the all-Ohio ceremonial which will be staged in the Cleveland Public Auditorium.

On Tuesday, 10,000 men in Shrine uniform will pass in review before Imperial Potentate Esten A. Fletcher, of Damascus Temple, Rochester, N. Y. This dramatic and colorful scene will take place in the Cleveland stadium and an assemblage of 75,000 persons is expected to witness the exhibition of Shrinemod's crack units.

The stadium exhibition will be the greatest peace-time gathering of uniformed men ever seen in Cleveland, it is believed. Sixty patrols, Indians, Arabs, patrols, drum corps, chanters, and 50 massed bands, will provide entertainment.

Exhibition drills will be given on Tuesday afternoon by expert uniformed units, many of which have won laurels in national competition for their skillful military maneuvers.

Advised as the "world's greatest spectacle," the pageant, "A Night in the Orient," will be presented at the stadium on Tues-

BATHING MISHAPS, HOW TO AVOID AND WHAT TO DO THEN

By DR. M. A. ELSTEIN, County Health Commissioner

Bathing is a splendid habit for our health and physical welfare. Physicians and Hygienists advocate it very strongly as one of our daily hygienic habits, provided it is not abused. Cleanliness is next to Godliness is an old saying and there is a great deal of truth in it.

Bathing combined with swimming is one of the best physical exercises as it makes us feel young, refreshed and vigorous. Every person should learn how to swim and become an expert swimmer, so that he can become of service to his fellow man in case of need and distress. Parents should teach their youngsters from the cradle how to swim. Little tots like to paddle in the bath tub and get a whole lot of fun of it. Swimming however has a number of short-comings when abused.

Young people think that the longer they stay in the water especially during the hot summer days they have a lot of fun, but they do themselves a lot of harm. Many get sun burnt, others get overheated, while still others are chilled through and subject themselves to diseases. Too long in the water is just as bad as too little. Some are afraid of the water that they are liable to get wet and keep away altogether.

Nevertheless all these are not as serious as the tragedies that result from acting smart, trying to make a showing of oneself, how far out they can swim, or what stunts they can do in dangerous places. Such conditions result in the most pathetic tragedies which are at time beyond human help.

How often do we find when we pick our daily papers news items which are heart breaking. Johnny, young and bright, was drowned, Mary smart and pretty, was drowned. Such tragedies break our hearts and we carry our imagination a little further and take a look into faces of the heart broken parents, who have toiled and struggled to bring up these precious youngsters to an age when they could be some dumdum. Our hearts stop beating and wonder in our mind, who should be blamed for all these tragedies. Shall we blame the parents for not having taught their children how to swim? Or for not supervising them when they went out swimming? Or the community for not providing safety zones and devices to protect these children from suffering the consequences?

Whoever is to be blamed, the tragedy is there just the same. This is the reason why these articles are being written to remind parents of their duties to teach and supervise their children, and also the children to be careful and not to outstep safety zones and endanger themselves to such tragedies.

In case of sun burn, the best thing is to consult your family physician let him advise you what to do, as he will give sound advice in such matters. The same thing is in case of becoming overheated.

In case of drowning, send immediately for a physician and for the life saving squad, as they are usually equipped with a Pulmotor. Place your drowned person over clothes, or a log, face turned downward. This will give you a chance to roll the person and squeeze out all the water that he has in his mouth, throat and lungs. Remove all the mucus of his mouth, pull forward the tongue with a clean dry handkerchief, to enable him to breathe better.

Squeeze on the sides of his ribs in order to get out of him all the swallowed water possible. Turn the case over to your physician or life saving squad as they are better trained, and know more what to do for these cases.
